Cellular Shades for Energy Efficiency

High-quality window treatments provided by one of our leading suppliers Hunter Douglas provide insulation, solar heat control, and natural light maximization gain during colder months. Lock in heat and save on your energy bill! The best styles for energy efficiency are cellular shades seen to the left, roller shades, roman shades, and shutters!

Top Down-Bottom Up Shades

These flexible window shades give you the ability to use window treatments like roman shades from the top down bottom up or in between. This gives you the ability to control natural light absorption, customize privacy, and insulate a room full of windows. These treatments can also be automated with a remote control or home power system.

Motorized Shading

Last but certainly not least, our favorite customization with Hunter Douglas- power automation. To get the most out of heat insulation during the months to come, automated shades, draperies, or shutters make it easy to save energy. Powerview automation allows you to schedule the movement of shades using a smartphone. Prevent heat loss all winter, even if you are away. A Powerview hub can be integrated into a smart home system installed by Liaison that enables programmable window treatments that adjust to light and temperature commands.
